

Bulls and cows are cool, I reckon. However when I first started trying to draw a cow, it basically looked like a fat horse with horns. It's like when I try and draw girls, they just look like boys with long hair and eyelashes. Anyway, moving on. I mucked around a bit and this is the bull I came up with, and I like him! See how you go, and then you can use him as a base to try some of your own.

Most of all, don't worry about making mistakes and have FUN, FUN, FUN! Drawing isn't meant to be a stress, so grab a sheet of paper and let your hand do the talking (not in a crazy person way, but with a pencil).

If you draw a bull or a cow you think is really cool, send it in to me, I would love to see it.

It's time to draw, so hang up the phone,

First up draw a juicy dog bone.

At each end of the bone do a hole and a bump,

Or, put another way, a divot and lump.

Your dog's starving, he doesn't want to wait,

So slam his bone down onto a plate.

Well you slammed too hard, or the plate
maker was slack,

Either way, looks like your plate's got a crack.

Now, to send your mum right round the bend,

The crack starts spreading out at each end.

Don't worry though, it won't spread further south,

But you have just drawn your bull's nose
and mouth

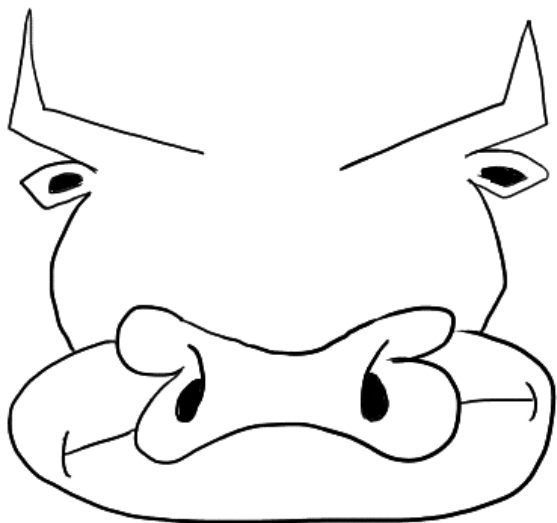

The rest of the drawing won't take weeks,
Especially if you put in your bull's chubby cheeks.

To make this bull equal with his peers,
He's going to have to have two ears.

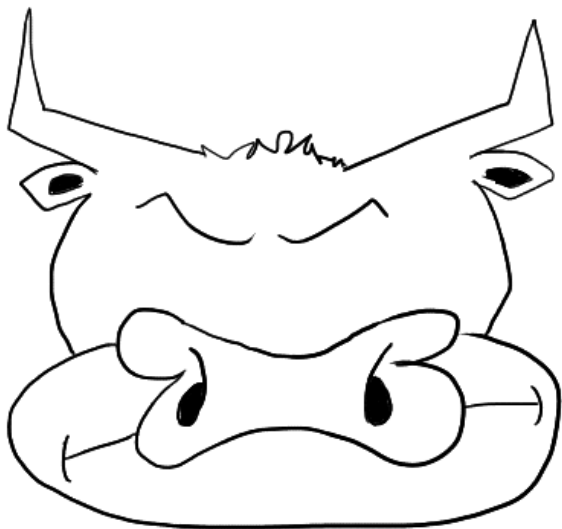

On the left side, do a really sharp horn,
You could use this bull to hold your corn.

You're doing great, your bull looks swell,
Give him a horn on the right side as well.

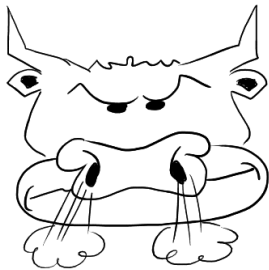

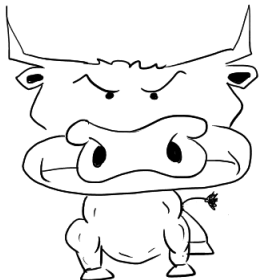

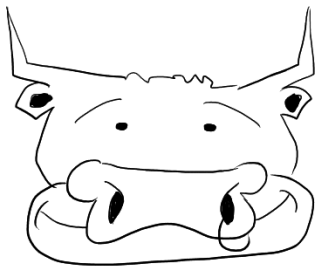

Between the horns draw in some hair,
Messy or neat, I don't really care.

If your bull's angry, he needs to frown,
So his eyebrows will have to be angled down.

The last thing to draw is no big surprise,
Chuck on a couple of beady little eyes.

Well done. You've finished your bull and that's no bull,

Now just keep practicing till your page is full.
